The Sports Museum, The Fours and
The Boston Globe present
"The Legendary Lunch" Series featuring Bruins
Greats Terry O'Reilly and Rick Middleton

The Boston Globe's Kevin Paul Dupont will moderate the panel discussion on January 27th

(Boston, MA) – The Sports Museum, The Fours Restaurant and Sports Bar and The Boston Globe are pleased to present the next installment in "The Legendary Lunch" series on January 27th at The Fours Boston on Canal Street.

For this Legendary Lunch (the second in an ongoing series), former Boston Bruins legends Terry O'Reilly and Rick Middleton will be joined by Globe sports writer Kevin Paul Dupont to discuss "The Bruins Lunch Pail Gang of the 1970s: Blood, Guts, and Grapes." O'Reilly and Middleton will share memories and stories of the legendary, Don Cherry-led team as well as additional thoughts on Boston Bruins hockey.

"The Legendary Lunch Series" is the ultimate experience for the true Boston sports fan – a Fours sports-themed lunch and an intimate sports conversation with the greatest and most beloved Boston sports legends and the knights of the keyboard, the Boston sports media.

In addition to a mouth-watering meal and great sports conversation, attendees will receive a gift bag filled with items from The Sports Museum, The Fours and The Boston Globe. All guests will also be entered into a raffle to win prizes.

Tickets for the January 27th event are $25 apiece and include both the lunch and panel discussion. The event begins promptly at noon and will last until 1:30 pm. All net proceeds will benefit The Sports Museum, a 501(c)(3) non-profit educational institution.

Space is limited so call The Fours Boston to reserve a ticket at 617-720-4455.
